DETAILED ACTION

Response to Arguments

1. Applicant's arguments filed 01/09/08 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. Regarding claims 67-62, data structures not claimed as embodied in computer-readable media are descriptive material per se and are not statutory because they are not capable of causing functional change in the computer. Such claimed data structures do not define any structural and functional interrelationships between the data structure and other claimed aspects of the invention which permit the data structure's functionality to be realized. In contrast, a claimed computer-readable medium encoded with a data structure defines structural and functional interrelationships between the data structure and the computer software and hardware components which permit the data structure's functionality to be realized, and is thus statutory.

Similarly, computer programs claimed as computer listings per se, i.e., the descriptions or expressions of the programs, are not physical "things." They are neither computer components nor statutory processes, as they are not "acts" being performed. Such claimed computer programs do not define any structural and functional interrelationships between the computer program and other claimed elements of a computer which permit the computer programs' functionality to be realized. In contrast, a claimed computer-readable medium encoded with a computer program is a computer element which defines structural and functional interrelationships between the computer program and the rest of the computer which permit the computer program's functionality to be realized, and is thus statutory.

In this case, the claim is not directed to a Claim 2 is not directed to a Process within the meaning of 101, since it's not a series of steps or acts being performed, but instead a program which when executed would cause a series of process steps or acts to occur.

The claim is not directed to a Machine within the meaning of 101, since it's not a part of a device or a combination of devices.

The claim is not directed to a Manufacture within the meaning of 101, since it's not an article produced from raw or prepared materials.

The claim is not a composition of Matter within the meaning of 101, since it's not a combination of two or more substances nor does it have any mass to be matter.

Therefore, the claim fails to fall within a statutory category of invention and should be rejected as non-statutory on at least that grounds.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

2. Claims 67-72 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter.

Data structures not claimed as embodied in computer-readable media are descriptive material per se and are not statutory because they are not capable of causing functional change in the computer. Such claimed data structures do not define any structural and functional interrelationships between the data structure and other claimed aspects of the invention which permit the data structure's functionality to be realized. In contrast, a claimed computer-readable medium encoded with a data structure defines structural and functional interrelationships between the data structure and the computer software and hardware components which permit the data structure's functionality to be realized, and is thus statutory.

Similarly, computer programs claimed as computer listings per se, i.e., the descriptions or expressions of the programs, are not physical "things." They are neither computer components nor statutory processes, as they are not "acts" being performed. Such claimed computer programs do not define any structural and functional interrelationships between the computer program and other claimed elements of a computer which permit the computer programs' functionality to be realized. In contrast, a claimed computer-readable medium encoded with a computer program is a computer element which defines structural and functional interrelationships between the computer program and the rest of the computer which permit the computer program's functionality to be realized, and is thus statutory.

Art Unit: 2611

In this case, the claim is not directed to a Claim 2 is not directed to a Process within the meaning of 101, since it's not a series of steps or acts being performed, but instead a program which when executed would cause a series of process steps or acts to occur.

The claim is not directed to a Machine within the meaning of 101, since it's not a part of a device or a combination of devices.

The claim is not directed to a Manufacture within the meaning of 101, since it's not an article produced from raw or prepared materials.

The claim is not a composition of Matter within the meaning of 101, since it's not a combination of two or more substances nor does it have any mass to be matter.

Therefore, the claim fails to fall within a statutory category of invention and should be rejected as non-statutory on at least that grounds.

Allowable Subject Matter

3. Claims 1-66 are allowed.

Conclusion

4. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
